

Sharing stories of Alabama and beyond

Sarah Bliss Wright, an AHA Road Scholar, gives a talk on "Alabama Cotton and Bemis Bags, Pieced Into Quilt History," at the Oxford Performing Arts Center, in Oxford, Alabama.

SINCE 1987, AHA's ROAD SCHOLARS have crisscrossed Alabama, providing fascinating programming for local communities across the state.

AHA's roster of Road Scholars includes historians, storytellers, authors, artists, poets, musicians, educators, veterans, journalists, genealogists, theologians, and philosophers. And they each have a story to share. Or, two. Or, three. Or more!

AHA's Road Scholars Speakers Bureau features:

35+ scholars | 100+ presentations

Topics include:

- History and genealogy
- Folklife and culture
- Film and theatre
- Music and art
- Literature
- Sports
- Law
- And much more!

Road Scholars are ideal for:

- Libraries and museums
- Senior citizen centers
- Historical societies
- Civic gatherings
- Cultural centers
- Historic sites
- Churches

Apply to host a Road Scholar:

alabamahumanities.org/road-scholars

Find a Road Scholar talk happening in your community:

alabamahumanities.org/events

APPLY TO HOST A ROAD SCHOLAR!

with the
ALABAMA HUMANITIES ALLIANCE

How can I bring a Road Scholar to my community?

1. Learn about our speakers and their presentations.
2. Read our Road Scholars grant guidelines to learn how to apply.
3. Apply for the speaker and talk you're interested in bringing to your local venue!

Applying for a Road Scholar presentation is easy:

- Rolling deadline, the 1st of each month.
- Simple, straightforward application.
- Email us with any questions:
landerson@alabamahumanities.org

Did You Know?

- ROAD SCHOLARS is AHA's longest-running program, born in 1987.
- 300+ talks delivered by Road Scholars statewide, since 2020.
- 5,000 Alabamians attend a Road Scholar talk each year.

APPLY TO HOST A ROAD SCHOLAR

alabamahumanities.org/road-scholars

AHA's Road Scholars Speakers Bureau is made possible, in part, thanks to the generous support of the Holle Family Foundation. Among many other initiatives, the Holle Family Foundation supports nonprofits whose work celebrates Alabama's art, history, and culture—prime areas of focus for our Road Scholars' statewide presentations! AHA is grateful for the support. Learn more at hollefoundation.org.